

No New Oil

Oil, war and climate change:
dismantling the oil economy

10.30am - 6pm Sat 11th Oct 2003 Speakers ~ Videos ~ Workshops
London School of Economics

Clement House, 'D' Building, Aldwych, London. Nearest tubes: Holborn, Temple

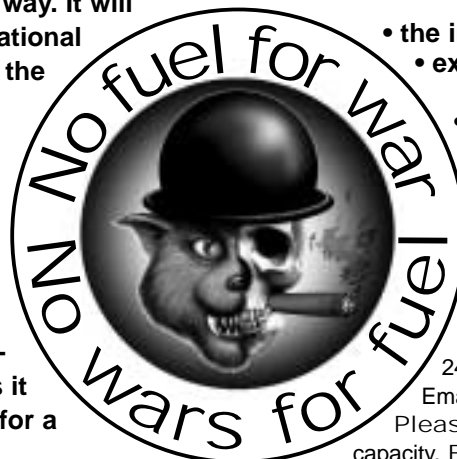

The oil economy generates conflict and destruction at all stages. It seizes lands, pollutes rivers, and kills and tortures those who stand in its way. It will fight any war and undermine international law to secure new supplies. It fuels the climate change which threatens all our futures with floods, droughts, storms and heatwaves.

Enough!

It's time to break our cycle of oil addiction, confront the companies responsible, and challenge the public funding (our taxes) which makes it possible. It's time to work together for a just future without fossil fuels.

The day will feature speakers, videos and workshops on:

- the impacts of oil and climate change;
- exposing the oil-driven agenda in Iraq;
- the human cost of oil wars;
- worldwide resistance to fossil fuel expansion;
- action we can take to dismantle the oil economy.

Brought to you by Rising Tide
- taking action on root causes of climate change

Email: info@risingtide.org.uk Phone: 01865

241 097 and LSE People and Planet

Email: su.soc.peopleandplanet@lse.ac.uk

Please register in advance due to limited capacity. Entrance by donation to cover costs.

www.risingtide.org.uk